BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES Corrado Vittorio Battistoni was born in Perugia in 1984, where he studied and earned a high school diploma from the "Pietro Vannucci" High School. He subsequently attended the Faculty of Architecture at the University of Florence.

In Umbria, he then dedicated himself to learning graphic techniques, particularly lithography and drypoint, at the Laboratory Museum of Graphic Arts and Typography "Grifani Donati" in Città di Castello, where he encountered the vibrant artistic activity of the area, which would have a profound impact on him.

At the Academy of Fine Arts in Rome, he continued his education and trained as an engraver, specializing in lithography. He also attended free nude art courses. He created and printed some works at the historic "Bulla" printing house in Rome.

Following a strong instinctive attraction, he experimented with painting, which deeply captivated him, and continued his graphic work in parallel with his new approach to painting.

The same ancient gestures and signs give us today's art. The artistic experience becomes a design possibility; matter, technique, and spirit project themselves forward into infinite possible solutions. The possible is the new layer of contemporary culture.

The creative act concentrates speed, precision, visibility, order and chaos, action and stasis, intuition, sublimation, place and non-place, noise and sound, nature and artifice, birth and death, revolution and peace.

The act of painting transcends natural time, and the human condition itself decays. It is the seed of a new life, of a metaphysical, incalculable time, perceptible only if one is curious about the mysteries that populate creation.

"Healing comes from plants and the knife, from a righteous and holy person, and from the mantras one chants."
